Multi-racial Britain, based on BBC British History, The Making of Modern Britain.

Multi-racialism is easy to talk about but hard to achieve. Nowadays, Britain is more open than ever before. For many years, Britons have got used to seeing black sportsmen representing them internationally. The famous 'Cool Britannia' mix of music and fashion derives from different ethnic street styles. We are also an unprecedented level of marriages between the races. Mixed race couples are more common in Britain than in the US which has had a larger black population for longer. Many British either have or at least know someone who has a black person in their family. Different races and cultural influences are given equal respect. Ideas about the desirability of racial purity have to be examined by even the most die hard conservatives. We have come some way but there is still further to go. We will know that Britain has become a multi-racial society, when the skin colour of a British MP is no more significant than the colour of their eyes.
