| A. Let's say you decide to focus on your breathing. Breathe normally while you simply pay attention to your breath. If you want, you can close your eyes. As you breathe in and out, just follow each breath. B. To practise meditation, start by sitting in a relaxed, comfortable position. Pick something to focus your attention on, like your body or your breathing. C. Keep breathing and bringing your attention back to the breathing every time your mind goes away. Try to do this for 5 minutes. When you decide to finish, ask yourself if you feel more relaxed now. D. While trying to focus on one thing – and we've chosen breathing – you might start thinking about what's for lunch, or whether you remembered to do your homework, or that nice song you often hear on the radio. That's your mind losing focus. It's natural, minds do that all the time! E. So whenever your attention goes away, just turn it back to your breathing again. That's how you train your attention. |
